Explain: NCDOL is updating the information for the industry standard for tramways and funiculars. This rule was last amended in 1992 and needs updating to reference the correct name of the American National Standards Institute (ANSI) B77.1, which is Passenger Ropeways – Aerial Tramways, Aerial Lifts, Surface Lifts, Tows and Conveyors . This is the primary industry safety standard for ski lifts/chair lifts. The General Assembly also amended NCGS 95-117 of the NC Passenger Tramway Act to add funiculars and gondolas to the definition of passenger tramway. [See Section 14(b) of Session Law 2017-211; https://www.ncleg.gov/EnactedLegislation/SessionLaws/PDF/2017-2018/SL2017-211.pdf]. Therefore, NCDOL is also amending 13 NCAC 15.0205 to incorporate the ANSI industry standard for funiculars, which is ANSI B77.2, Funiculars – Safety Requirements . It is extremely important for the public to have all the amusement device owners complying with the most current industry standards to ensure that rides function safely. The changes are primarily technical in nature to reflect the update to the title, contact information for ANSI, current cost of B77.1, and to incorporate by reference ANSI B77.2. Neither the State of North Carolina nor any municipalities own any tramways or funiculars.

Explain: NCDOL will incorporate by reference two additional American Society of Testing and Materials (ASTM) industry standards in 13 NCAC 15.0402. ASTM F1193, Standard Practice for Quality, Manufacture, and Construction of Amusement Rides and Devices , provides the minimum manufacturing requirements for amusement rides and devices and provides the minimum requirements for a written quality assurance program for an amusement ride or device manufacturer, or component supplier. ASTM F770, Standard Practice for Ownership, Operation, Maintenance, and Inspection of Amusement Rides and Devices , establishes procedures for the operation, maintenance, inspection, and training for amusement rides and devices. Amusement rides are quickly becoming more computerized and complex; the incorporation by reference of these industry standards will provide more current standards that the EAD inspectors may rely upon for the safety of the public. Additionally, the rule change requests a technical correction for previously incorporated standard ASTM F1159 - Standard Practice for design of Amusement Rides and Devices that are Outside the Purview of Other F24 Design Standards ; those technical changes reflect the update to the title, contact information for ASTM, the current cost for ASTM F1159. It is extremely important for the public to have all the amusement device owners and operators complying with the most current industry standards to ensure that rides function safely. Minimal local funds affected.

The current fee structure has not been increased since 2007 and needs to be increased to reflect the cost of inspections that have risen due to increased training needs, retention of qualified inspectors, and increased travel costs. Inspection fee increases are necessary to make market-based staff salaries adequate to recruit and retain technical staff as EAD inspector salaries have fallen behind regionally and are significantly lower than private sector salaries. This is especially true in relation to the expanded roles of EAD inspectors who must inspect elevators, escalators, wind turbine elevators, construction lifts, handicap lifts, and personnel hoists. The EAD inspectors perform a vital role in ensuring that the safety and welfare of the public is well-guarded. NCDOL has determined that specific expertise is needed for individuals to perform inspections and to maintain on-going educational standards for new elevator designs and new amusement device designs, which are becoming more computer driven rather than purely mechanical. The annual inspection of elevators and other devices takes place on a rolling basis; other inspections are performed upon installation or alteration. *Note: domestic elevators are not inspected pursuant to the NC Elevator Safety Act.

Explain: NCDOL proposes to increase select amusement device fees listed respectively in 13 NCAC 15.0703, and to add new named devices and clarify specific types of amusement devices. All fees remain within the current statutory maximum fees. As technology and the nature of entertainment has evolved, the types of amusement devices have evolved and increased. Such new forms of entertainment also come with some inherent safety risks to the public, and thus require inspection to ensure they are operating within acceptable industry parameters to ensure the public is protected as much as possible from injury. All the named rides in the amendment have been inspected and will continue to be inspected, but the amendment is to add clarity as to the types of rides inspected. There is also an amendment to separate inspections of Go Kart Tracks and the actual Go Karts themselves. The current fee structure has not been increased since 2007 and needs to be increased to reflect the cost of inspections that have risen due to increased training needs, retention of qualified inspectors, and increased travel costs. Some devices are already at the statutory maximum. The initial fee was established in 2005 and there has been no increase since that time. The increase is needed to reflect the cost of inspections that have risen due to increased training needs, retention of qualified inspectors, and increased travel costs. Inspection fee increases are necessary to make market-based staff salaries adequate to recruit and retain technical staff as EAD inspector salaries have fallen behind regionally and are significantly lower than private sector salaries.
