| 9B. Explain: The current rule only allows issuance of certificates upon Board approval at regularly scheduled quarterly meetings. State certification exams have been administered by contracted vendors since 2009 in a computer based format at a number of locations throughout North Carolina rather than as a paper based exam administered by NCDOT staff on a quarterly basis. The current rule delays the issuance of certifications unnecessarily once the applicant passes the State exam and impedes local governments from recruiting, retaining and promoting needed workforce. The construction industry's rapid resurgence and increased permitting activity requires increased inspections and plan review by local government jurisdictions. Current statute allows the Board to issue Probationary certificates for up to three years. The current Board rule is unnecessarily restrictive at two years to meet the demand for more multi-trade inspectors for the disciplines of Building, Mechanical, Electrical and Plumbing required for a typical single-family home series of inspection. | |
